
Notes: Gross saving by sector, percent of GNI. Corporate saving splits into a profit component (the change in operating surplus at the earlier retention ratio) and a retention component; household saving into a saving-rate component (the change in the saving rate at earlier income) and an income component; government saving into the change in disposable income and minus the change in final consumption. 2012→2015 and 2023→2025: annual OECD sector accounts, cumulated over the years. H1 2026: Bank of Korea quarterly national accounts; household income and saving are published, while GNI, national saving and corporate operating surplus for 2026 are extrapolated from published growth rates and saving rates, and government and financial-corporation saving are held at their 2025 shares of GNI, so corporate saving is a residual. The two sources differ in coverage and vintage.